This image shows a vertical strip of ancient Chinese calligraphy, likely from a stele or a wall inscription. The characters are written in a bold, expressive brush style. The top portion contains several large characters, possibly '大德' (Great Virtue). Below them, there are more characters, including what appears to be '子雲' (Zi Yun) and other smaller, less distinct text. The script is highly stylized, with varying line weights and ink saturation.

This block contains two vertical columns of Chinese calligraphy. The left column is written in large, bold seal script characters, with the top part reading '上書言事' (Shàng shù yán shì) and the bottom part reading '其言事' (qí yán shì). To the right of this column is a vertical red seal impression. The right column is also in seal script, with the top part reading '其言事' (qí yán shì) and the bottom part reading '其言事' (qí yán shì), with a vertical red seal impression to its right.
