

Below the illustration, there are several columns of vertical Japanese text. The text is arranged in a structured manner, with some larger characters and some smaller text interspersed. The columns are separated by thin vertical lines. The text appears to be a continuation of the scene or a related narrative, possibly providing context or commentary on the events depicted in the illustration above. The characters are in a traditional kuzushiji style, typical of Edo-period publications.