

Vertical text on the right margin, possibly a library or collection number.

This block contains a dense arrangement of text, likely a manuscript or a collection of documents. It is organized into several vertical columns. The rightmost column features large, bold characters, possibly a title or a section header. The middle and left columns contain smaller, more densely packed text, which appears to be a list or a detailed record. The overall layout is highly structured and characteristic of traditional East Asian book design.