Students who have not registered for direct debit should pay their tuition fees according to the invoice that will be sent by the Accounting Group around late August. Tuition Fee Exemption for the Second Half of AY2026

If you already applied for tuition fee exemption for both the first and second halves together, you do not need to apply again for the second half, unless your family finances or family members have changed since the previous application, or you will change your course of study from the second half, such as from a master's course to a doctoral course. Please note that the result for the first half will not be automatically carried over to the second half. The result for the second half will be determined through a separate screening process. For details about tuition fee exemption for the second half, please check our website or bulletin boards.

Please note that students who applied for tuition fee exemption for both the first and second halves together and will exceed the standard period of study from the second half are required to submit a Form8 "Reason for Extending Beyond the Standard Course Period" by the end of September. Students to whom this applies will be contacted separately with a request to submit the document.

How to Confirm Whether You Need to Apply for the Second Half

■ If You Applied for Tuition Exemption in the First Half

All applicants for the first half were treated as full-year applicants, meaning that their applications covered both the first half and the second half. Therefore, if you have applied for the first half, you have automatically applied for the second half as well.

However, your second-half application will be automatically canceled if either of the following applies to you:

- if you change your student status in the second half (enter a doctoral course, transfer to a different department, etc.)
- If your student ID number changes due to transferring to a different faculty/graduate school

If any of the above applies and you still wish to apply for tuition exemption, you must submit a new application during the application period for the second half.

■ Cases where you must reapply

Even if you applied for tuition exemption in the first half, you will need to reapply during the second-half application period in the following cases:

Cases Requiring Reapplication	• Cases in which the information (family, study or household budget) provided in the application on April 1 has changed by October 1. • Cases where the applicant will receive an incentive grant, RA for excellence, etc. from October due to the adoption of various programs. • Cases where international students did not receive a scholarship at the time of the first-half application, but later received a scholarship on or before October 1. • Cases where the Tuition Exemption Team instructs the applicant to reapply after the first-half application.
Cases Requiring New Application for the Second Half (Reapplication is not possible.)	• Cases where students change their program in October. (e.g., cases where the applicant completes the Master's program in September, and enters the Doctorate program in October, cases where the applicant completes the Junior Division in September, and enters the Senior Division in October) • Cases where your student ID number changes due to transferring to a different department or graduate school, etc. from October

■ If None of the Above Applies

If none of the above conditions apply to you, no additional application for the second half is required.

Even if no additional application is required, your second-half exemption status will be reassessed, and the result may be different from your first-half result.

The second-half application status will be reflected on UTAS around early November, and the results will be released in mid-January. Please be sure to check your exemption result at that time.
